CUSTOMER PAIN POINTS

Aanya faces several challenges when choosing stationery products online. She wants products that are attractive and personalized without being too expensive or difficult to find.

Limited budget: Many personalized stationery products can be expensive for students.

Lack of personalization: Generic notebooks and planners may not reflect her personality or interests.

Too many choices: She can find it difficult to decide between different products and designs.

Quality concerns: Online product images do not always make it easy to judge the actual quality.

Limited unique options: Finding stationery that feels different from standard products can be challenging.

Balancing style and functionality: Some products look attractive but are not practical for everyday use.

Gift selection: She wants unique and affordable stationery when buying gifts for friends.

PaperNest can address these pain points by offering affordable, creative, personalized and practical stationery products.
